Raising Awareness of Future Trends in Education

Education worldwide is moving toward creative disruption on multiple fronts. While the situation it is presently facing is rather complex, much of the challenge can be summed up quite simply. Ultimately, educational institutions are about to face some of the core challenges that have also impacted business fields such as manufacturing, banking and journalism over the last decade. But it is possible that the education might be facing them all at once. We will discuss about changes determined by technological breakthroughs, globalization, trust, ethics or demographic drivers as well as offer several examples on how organizations are tapping on such trends.
